Two Indians came to the house of Major Lucky, while his wife was alone and called for something to eat which was given them when the Indians presented a knife and frightened Mrs. Lucky very much but the Indians made some signs by which she understand that they intended to give it to her as pay for the food she gave them. Deponent frequently saw the said knife. The general supposition was at the time that the Indians intended to kill Major Lucky. She further says that an officer in the said war by the name of Finch (6) was a near neighbor of her fathers and remembers when word came to Finch's wife that Mr. Finch was killed by Indians at MontGaup that Mr. Finch went into fits and it was thought she would not live for some days, and that deponents mother was sent for to stay with her during her sickness.
